WEEKS PLEADS FOR PROTECTIVE TARIFF

Senator Says Revision Upward Is

Senator John W. Weeks, of Massachusetts, who is actively in the race for the Republican nomination for Resident, announced yesterday that the preventive of the threatened dumping of foreign-made goods on the United States market at the close of the war in Europe lies in a revision of the tariff upward and the fixing of duties high enough to protect the industries that may be threatened by the invasion of the home market. He has little faith, apparently, in the plans suggested by administration leaders for a special "anti-dumping" amendment to the Underwood-Simmons tariff act.

In a letter received here from Senator Weeks he says:

"There is only one practicable, sensible way in which to meet the 'dumping' menace at the close of the war, and that is by restoring a protective tariff to the vast variety of American manufacturers which would be affected by this threatening situation. Such a step upon the part of Congress would have the two-fold merit of keeping out this surplusage of foreign-made goods, thereby maintaints that street lighting is purely a municipal expense.

A verdict for the defendant has been returned by a jury in Circuit Court, No. 1918, in the case of Joseph B. Chapman against the Washington Railway and Electrict Company. The plaintiff sued is bequeathed to the widow, Lucy B. Platt, for life.

The state of Patrick V. Dolan, who died October 29, amounts to $2,346, according to petition filed in Probate Court. nue, a consideration that should make a very general appeal just at this time when such pressing demands are being made upon our financial resources.

"When the war is over European goods wil flow into this country at such a rate that our manufacturing plants will be materially embarrassed. Foreign labor will be more willing to work at even less than every before and as a result. wall be more willing to work at even less wages than ever before, and as a result not only will the manufacturer suffer, but the thousands of employes in this country will feel the effects of the Underwood-Simmons free trade law, unless something is done to prevent this over-flow of manufactures being dumped upon our shores. I sincerely trust that the Democratic leaders, who are now represented as favoring a restoration of the sugar tariff, will take an equally graceful attitude with regard to the tariff on other American manufactures, instead of seeking some roundabout way of meeting the situation in order to save their own discredited theories concerning the country's economical needs."

New York, Nov. 4.—Believed to have been temporarily deranged after a long illness. Edward McManus, a secretary, killed his wife and his 4-year-old son by cutting their throats with a razor, and then committed suicide early today at his home, 46 West 16th street.

McManus first cut the throat of his wife.) Gertrude. The wounded woman picked up her 4-year-old son William and ran for the door. McManus stopped them and cut the boy's throat. The wife, wrested the dying boy from McManus' grasp, however, and ran out into the hall. At the threshold she dropped the child and staggered downstairs to the apartment of her brother-in-law, William McManus. She reached the door, pounded on it and dropped dead. The police found McManus and the boy dead. Another child, Gertrude Mary, was lying in her crib with a slight wound in her neck.

McManus was 31 years old and had South Norwalk, Conn., Nov. 4-Ther.
